NOTE OF THE WEEK.

Saturday, 18th December, 1858.

The English mail has for once arrived before the final departure of the outward bound packet. So soon as it became known that the European had reached Melbourne, it was promptly determined by the colonial Government and the Company's agent to detail the Columbian until time should have been afforded to the Sydney authorities to receive the correspondence letters. The City of Sydney was also, at the instance of the Australian Consul, the first to receive these letters.

On Tuesday evening, the 13th, the mail arrived until midnight on Wednesday, the 14th, being closed at nine.

But the European did not arrive until late in the afternoon, and the "shades of evening" were at hand ere mail could be delivered, so very little time for reading and answering letters was really obtained. It may now begin to be seen that the arrival of the mail was a sufficient working of the mail communication in Syria for the Peninsular and Oriental Company, but for a steady opening up of the Panama route—so long and earnestly maintained here to be the best and most economical, as well as the shortest.

There has not been much business done in Parliament during the week, but such as has been disposed of has been of a most important character. On Tuesday afternoon, the 13th, a sharp struggle in committee upon the question of State votes, to whom the power of nominating members of the House should be given, was the subject of discussion only. A supplement of £14,000 to the amount reserved by the schedules was asked for, and this, after a sharp struggle in committee on Tuesday evening, was refused by a majority of one. The division was 13 to 12. The resolution, as it was referred to, in point of form, was a reduction of the sum voted to one shilling. This, however, had to be confirmed on the following day, by a resolution of the House, as it could become binding. The decision was again affirmed on division, and this time by a majority of two, the votes being seventeen for, and fifteen against it. As might be expected, this decision was referred to, in point of form, as a reduction among the members of the House, as it was the office of the House to decide whether it would be binding.

Two petitions were presented yesterday, and others of the same character are, it is understood, in the course of preparation. The two petitions already presented have been from the Hebrew persuasion and from the Presbyterians. But it is on the clergy of the Church of England, it is said, that this step in the direction of disunion will prove most hardly. It has been urged that this action will be regarded more gradually, and that there should be no notion of it. But has not ample notice been already given? The abolition of all State support to particular churches was one of the things that members, returned at the last general election, were most frequently urged, by their constituents, to struggle for, and pledges to do so were given by many of them for years past there has been a general outcry, not merely against the practice of any supplement to the schedules, but for the abolition of the schedules itself—for the abolition of all State support.

The decision of Tuesday evening must be regarded as preliminary to the more sweeping measure just alluded to. The denominations concerned cannot do better than to let this decision be a means for adopting the sort of organization for the support of their pastors, which they will have to hand to depend upon wholly. They are still in a far better position than the members of those denominations who receive no aid from the public purse. They will draw funds to which no pittance of other denominations are forced to contribute.

It is clear, however, that there will be some further struggles, even in the Legislature itself, before the measure is passed, to enable Mr. Green to carry his bill.

The Bishop explained that these clauses referred to the resolution of the Municipal Council; that the resolution for the year 1858, to be recommended, with a view to each committee being formed of the whole of the members of the Council.

The Sydney Morning Herald.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 20, 1858.

We have received a rather remarkable speech, published in pamphlet form, delivered by Mr. JAMES BUSBY, in opposition to the federalization of the colonies while continuing to be dependencies of the mother country. The circumstances of New Zealand are somewhat peculiar, and there are difficulties in carrying on a Federal Government in that country which would not be encountered had those colonies obtained something like confederacy and the strength of a state.

A sort of experimental Government was established for New Zealand. There is a Provincial Legislature and Administration for each of the separately colonies; the offices are elective, the GOVERNOR being called the Superintendent, but over all is the Federal Government and a legislature intended to provide for the general interests of the whole.

The sphere of the Federal Government is, at the same time, the sphere of a provincial Government. This was not at all an impossible thing that within the same circle would be found two administrations, having very different objects and often

MELBOURNE.

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]

THURSDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 16th.—The House of Assembly adjourned to-morrow, until the 11th January. The Council will, in all probability, do the same. The Reform Bill has been sent down by the Upper House with only one amendment—a division of the constituency of South Melbourne into two parts. Emerald Hill is to return one member, and Sandridge one. The Government will agree to this amendment, and so the bill will virtually pass. It will receive the royal assent to-morrow, at two o'clock. In the Council Mr. Fellows has done good service in calling renewed attention to the recent magisterial appointments. There cannot be an atom of doubt that the Government have been shamelessly deceived in this matter, and have appointed parties altogether unsound and unsatisfactory, unless the principle be admitted that every free-born Australian has a right to be tried, in summary jurisdiction, by his peers. A wife-beater, a drunken cobbler, a disreputable policeman, a cab-driver (hard fate that he should be mixed up in such a company!), a common assaulter, and a "jingleman" who, in appearing before the Judge of the Supreme Court to be sworn, requested that the Court might be cleared, as he "could never sign his name while people were looking at him";—ill these, and many of their friends, have been placed on the Commission of the Peace. Men who have never beaten their wives, who have never mended shoes while under the influence of alcoholic beverages, who have never been speculative policemen, who have never driven a cab nor let drive an acquaintance, and who can sign their names in public, are morally inferior.

Mr. Fellows made a great speech on the behalf and in that of responsible men last evening, which called up that of a judicious silent member, the Hon. Mr. Stewart, to reply. But the Government were beaten by 14 to 8. Responsibility has gained the day, and poor erring human nature is still to be brought up for examination before men unprincipled in the very act upon which they are called upon to adjudicate.

"What! am I mad? A man may see how the world is with me. Look with thine ears. See how Jon Justice rales upon you simple folk. Hast in thine ear! Change places and handy dandy,—which is the justice? which is the thief?"—King Lear.

The resolution of Mr. Fellows was amended by Mr. T. A. Beckitt, and passed the Council in the following short speech:—"We the members of the opposition, inquire and report to the House, the measures taken by the Government to secure a judicious selection of persons for appointment to the magistracy, and whether any, and, if any, what inquiry is to place before submitting their names to the Governor."

The Government have at length roused themselves from the apathy with which they have all along viewed the administration of the Melbourne and Geelong districts, and Mr. O'Shaughnessy is now fully aware of his intention, to move a resolution in the Assembly affixing the property of introducing a bill empowering the Government to purchase the line. Nothing has as yet transpired as to the probable conditions of the purchase, but their seems little doubt that the shareholders will not, by exorbitant demands, place a sum exorbitant in the way of their getting rid of an undeniably bad, and really useless, line, not marvellously lucrative when compared with the difficulty which Mr. O'Shaughnessy and his colleagues will have to contend with will be the fact, that a large proportion of the shares are held by a foreign proprietary, i.e., a great number of shares are on the English register. Most of these shareholders have never been in Australia, and cannot therefore form a just estimate of the value of the line. So that the body, on hearing of the intention of the Melbourne Government to purchase, may stand out for a higher figure than it would be prudent on the part of the Government to give. Eventually the Government will succeed in its intended purchase, as the shareholders must at last be convinced that "half a loaf is better than no bread."

The Melbourne Guard election took place yesterday. The gentleman who signed himself M. C. E. has been defeated by Mr. Bell, by a majority of two to one.

We have had a brief visit from Lady Young and Lady MacDonnell, the former of whom arrived on Saturday by the European, and proceeded yesterday to Tasmania, the latter being on her way to England by the Anglessey, which vessel sails this afternoon. Lady Young is the guest of Sir Henry Barkly, at Joppa. On Saturday, a moderately large gathering at the Lonsdale Hotel; and on Tuesday, Lady MacD. and accompanied Miss Hussey in the Queen's Royal, on the occasion of Mr. F. Young's benefit, when there was a brilliant house.

"The Eleven," for the approaching grand Inter-colonial Cricket Match, will be chosen on Saturday. The committee, to whose hands the arrangements for the match are intrusted, are engaged in their exertions to secure the perfection of every Friday for the purpose. His Excellency the Governor has permitted his name to be used as patron.

Some signs are at length developing themselves of a probability of adjusting the long-pending difficulties with which the National Bank of Australasia is surrounded. A few of the shareholders—who have not hitherto interested themselves in the dispute—have come to an arrangement by which the directors, and some of the shareholders, are giving for a wind-up of the concern. This step is taken on the ground of alleged hopeless dissensions amongst the directors. On Monday, a rule is to be issued to restrain the defendants from transacting business, or incurring liabilities on the bank's account, was granted, reserving on Monday next.

The post continues in active search for Mrs. Connell, the sister of the deceased, who has been in Richmond Paddock, on Friday week. Her踪迹 have escaped their vigilance, an extraordinary circumstance, considering she was known to have money in her possession; and the publicity which has been given to the occurrence, and the fulness of the description, staid at every corner of the city, render it improbable that she can have succeeded in obtaining a asylum as a peasant. All sorts of rumours have been current respecting her, and she is supposed by many that she has destroyed herself.

There is positively nothing doing in trade. All hands are busy preparing for the mail. The Columbian will sail at daylight on Saturday. The wool sales have been put off, the auction rooms are flagging, and the houses are silent.

A box of gold weighing 1500 ounces has been lost in the bay, while being transferred from a steamer to the Morning Light. The diving team is being brought into operation for its recovery. A Board of average masters have decided that the salver will be entitled to £250.

The P. and O. MAIL CONTRACT.—A mercantile gentleman belonging to the ship, but present on a visit to London, writes the following letter:—The most important event, however, in a colonial point of view, is the acceptance of the P. and O. Company's tender for the conveyance of your mails. If I could be of service, I will be happy to assist you in your correspondence with the Post Office. The P. and O. Company's tender for the conveyance of your mails is for seven years, and the subsidy £180,000 per annum. You will, however, be sorry to hear that Sydney is to be the last point of arrival and the first of departure, and the present arrangements it will only be a branch route, connecting the port of Sydney with the port of Port Jackson. We answer, and, with filling topsails, proceed upon our course. The Washington however, is a small vessel, and is soon engulfed in the gloom—for red, green, and yellow—a triangle of stars.

Again over the dim waters shone the two Sydney lights—the waning and again waxing brilliance of the lighthouses, and the pale lustre of the beacon on the Iron Head. As I lay the deck and take a solitary smoke, watching that savage shore, I think of the dark, dread night when the Dusky crew, by the pines by the howling winds and hunger waves. The subject is a cheerful one. I divest it, and ascend the after hatchway; for the res angustis domi pardons the bad Latin—that nussel of a domicile, a birth in the twin decks.

INTERMEDIATE "ACCOMMODATION." If Pluto kept pigs, their sty, in dirt, darkness, and discomfort could hardly have surpassed the scene I witness. In a cramped quadrangle, formed on the road being unventilated—in several instances single-berths (fitted with bunks) I keelshes in pine close to the fourth by wob vessels, are grouped some five-and-twenty passengers, women, and children, in company with almost every kind of uncouth and screaming bird, a yelping terrier, a ruffian, and is soon engulfed in the gloom—for red, green, and yellow—a triangle of stars.

An uncovered square in a cistern of discoloured water, in which tea-leaves are floating like seaweed after a storm, has been graciously provided for our evening's repast. An oil lamp with a forged wick enables them to move a yard without coming into contact with the adjacent walls.

I remember me of certain ham-and-sandwiches and "soft tack" that a benevolent fairy caused to be deposited in my berth before we started, and having lost a tooth in my first attack upon the ship's biscuit! grope my way to those more edible stores, in order to secure a meal. A seashell berthmate sits upon his box, holding his paunch for a basin. Feeling relieved, he empties his vessel and dipping it into the stained warm water, makes it once more perform the function of a tea cup; sea sickness is a weakness of which, as a rule, I am not guilty, but, under these circumstances, I certainly begin to feel rather

HOMEBOUND ON A LAND-LUBBER'S LOG.

By Peter Possum.
OAR. L. UNDER WAY.

Upon a sunny, steaming afternoon in June, I bid goodbye to Sydney. She glances merrily, with sparkling panes through her veil of golden gauze—mist steeped in sunlight—when I make my bow. She looks so winsome that I half regret my long leave. But it is a long leave, and such regret. The last bales of wool have just been hoisted in; the skipper and the pilot are on board; the blue peter flies from the fore-mast-head like a fluttering forget-me-not; the Washington is hissing alongside like a Titan teakettle; the crew, to the chant of "Cheerly, men, heigho!" are lugging the anchor from its cozy couch at the bottom of the tranquil Cove; the Ossian Pasha will have long black sides baptised in ocean spray ere nightfall.

A little girl—unheeding the bustling crowd around—goes home to school, and the time for the last kiss is come. "Oh, brother!" exclaims the insensible young rascal, when he receives the moist salute; and, having watched his sister's descent into the wherry with the rest of countenance, condescends a vigorous handshake with the sailor, who is holding his chin-munching, his spiny morsels so composedly, whilst the captain's speculations are a丢 of whilst and a liking for whisky. He cares no more for his cabin than for the outside world, and the skipper's stores are to the captain; who, therupon, assigns one of the ship's boys as steward, and orders the carpenter to make us a few forms.

CHAPTER III. WHO'S WHO?

Here comes a scurrying breakfast next morning, taking our paanikins to the galley for our tea, and making our meal anywhere—or, on the bosom, on the longboat, the bulwarks and the bows. Here comes a scurrying breakfast next morning, taking our paanikins to the galley for our tea, and making our meal anywhere—or, on the bosom, on the longboat, the bulwarks and the bows. The skipper, who is the author of plenty of mischief, especially when we remember the costly cobin appointments in London and Liverpool liners), we get up an O. P. riot.

The captain's speculations are a丢 of whilst and a liking for whisky. He cares no more for his cabin than for the outside world, and the skipper's stores are to the captain; who, therupon, assigns one of the ship's boys as steward, and orders the carpenter to make us a few forms.

185 prime fat hams, from the Lower Macquarie, in lots to suit purchasers.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND.—Raymond Terrace.—GENTLEMEN.—At the termination of the trust you were pleased to confide to me, as your representative at the Conference held at Moreton Bay, I have the honor to inform you that the same is now completed, and the support of the Conference.

XVII. Clues of the Bill, and which, not having found a successor, consequently will not appear in reports of the meeting, needs, on my part, some explanation.

The amendment proposed was that there should be but one House, instead of two, in the colonies; and I did not then feel called to order by a member, I did not then feel there could be any use in adding another important reason influencing me on this question, namely, that in the petition adopted, 1852, at the last meeting at the School of Arts, Sydney, it was desired "That the petitioners (2000) firmly protest against the proposal of the Government, in which the bishops, clergy, and laity, shall not meet and vote in one council, with equal and concurrent authority and jurisdiction."

Now I come to see that there can be no EQUALITY, where there is a marked pre-eminence of one over the other.

Upon this principle, it was, that I supported the amendment, I do not say, in the interest of the colony, but in the interest of the mother country.

We have here no lords spiritual, as in England, who sit as barons in the House of Lords, no branch of nobility, and no church establishment, but the Church of England, which is open to all, and to their talents, yet this, as declared in the House of Commons, is an excess of constitutional exercise on the part of her Majesty omitted in the patent of the Metropolitan; that, therefore, it would be better return to the simplicity of scriptural precedent.—

XVIII. The amendment proposed was that there should be but one House, instead of two, in the colonies; and I did not then feel there could be any use in adding another important reason influencing me on this question, namely, that in the petition adopted, 1852, at the last meeting at the School of Arts, Sydney, it was desired "That the petitioners (2000) firmly protest against the proposal of the Government, in which the bishops, clergy, and laity, shall not meet and vote in one council, with equal and concurrent authority and jurisdiction."

Upon this principle, it was, that I supported the amendment, I do not say, in the interest of the colony, but in the interest of the mother country.

I am, Gentlemen, your obedient servant,

RICHARD SADLER.
